

Cabinet, who in turn will be responsible to Parliament.

Complete tranquillity prevails in the city at the present moment, but anxious looks are cast in the direction of the Yildiz, the refusal of part of its garrison to submit being the serious feature of the situation. General Scheffer, concentrating forces near this point. Troops have been pouring in since noon, and several battalions have been planted on the heights. But it is feared that the task of capturing this well-guarded stronghold may be extremely difficult, owing to its excellent defensive position and the thorough preparedness of the garrison.

The other positions already captured by the investing army were not provided with artillery, which gave the assailants an immense advantage, since they were able to shell the barracks without reply from artillery. The Yildiz garrison not only possesses artillery, but it is believed that the neighborhood is mined.

Attack Foreshadowed.
The sending of the Saloni army yesterday afternoon to within two and one-half miles of the palace fore-shadowed the attack upon the city, which began at 5 o'clock this morning. The invaders had been picked and small parties of cavalry had reconnoitered the ground. After desultory firing, just before dawn, a strong advance was made in the southwest part of Pera. The attacking forces entered out in a long line and made an assault upon the Matikka and Tash Kischla barracks, south of the palace, where they met with a stubborn resistance.

The invaders continued to advance in three columns with the utmost precision, and occupied all the points of vantage.

The volunteers from Ghievell received a baptism of fire from Matikka, but they stood their ground well and repelled with steady volleys. The strength of the volunteers was overwhelming, and the Matikka garrison soon surrendered.

Almost immediately the loyal soldiers in the Tash Kischla barracks, the opposite hill, opened with a deadly fire, but notwithstanding that many of them fell, the Saloni troops did not hesitate in their advance, but moved slowly and cautiously, blinking up their machine guns, which eventually resulted in silencing the garrison. There were heavy losses on both sides.

While this attack was proceeding, another corps of Saloni infantry encountered a sudden attack from the Tash Kischla barracks, where the Saloni troops, but there were only supplied with rifles.

Muskar Bey, commander of the Saloni force, fell dead, and many were killed or wounded on the first assault.

The fighting in the Stamboul quarter occurred at the porte, where the garrison refused to surrender, but after a sharp fusillade they were obliged to hoist the white flag. There was stiff fighting at the Implik Haneh barracks, where the Saloni troops, who recently arrived from Tschatalie, were quartered.

European Thronged Streets.
Perhaps the most remarkable feature of the attack upon the city was the great number of people of all nationalities, including many European women, who thronged the streets immediately outside the zone of fire. Everybody showed that confidence had been inspired by the discipline, valor and friendly courtesy of the invading troops, particularly the gendarmes of Saloni.

The number of casualties probably will never be known, but it is estimated far into the thousands. Around the Tash Kischla barracks alone it is believed that 1,000 or more men fell. The private houses within the line of fire suffered greatly.

One of the heaviest losses to the Parliamentary forces occurred through the misuse of the white flag by the besieged Tash Kischla barracks. For more than an hour the machine guns of the attacking party poured a hail of shots into the garrison, and then the defenders hoisted the white flag. Infantry moved forward in the open and the gun fire was suspended. When the battalion was within 100 yards of the barracks the guns behind opened up a dearly fire on them, twenty-seven being killed and eighty wounded.

In one quarter some 5,000 or 7,000 troops were engaged in the conflict, but with the terrific exchange of shots few non-combatants were killed. Half of the Saloni chausseurs, who were brought from the country districts several months ago and placed in the Yildiz garrison by the Committee of Union and Progress, and took a prominent part in the recent mutiny, fell fighting in or near the barracks, where they murdered most of their officers only ten days ago.

In the pockets of some of the dead were found large sums of money in gold, which it is assumed, was part of the price of their loyalty.

Americans Behaved Well.
The American ambassador, Mr. Leishman, declared that the conduct of the Americans during the fighting and while he was arranging to send them off on a steamer was splendid. The men displayed the keenest interest in the strange battle, and every woman exhibited the greatest pluck. There was no fainting and no hysterics.

At noon the battle ceased, and precautionary measures were immediately taken by those upon whom victory had rested to insure the safety of the residents. No disorders of any kind occurred during the afternoon, and no looting was permitted. General satisfaction seemed to be felt at the swift change from uncertainty to constitutional order.

Should the Sultan remain in office it will merely be in a nominal way. His allowance will be greatly restricted and he will have no means for further agitation, should his mind turn again in this direction. It is credibly reported that the Sultan has distributed within recent days 2,000,000 pounds, Turkish, to the troops. The question of his deposition or his execution can hardly be considered a possibility. He has been tried, in fact, and condemned in the minds of the Committee of Union and Progress as unworthy, but it is authoritatively stated that he will be allowed to remain where he is for the present.

Americans Wounded.
Several Americans were wounded including Frederick Moore and Harry G. Dwight, both correspondents, and Alexander A. Gargill, first lieutenant of the American embassy. Fifteenth, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, inquired personally of Ambassador Leishman regarding Moore's condition, and expressed regret that an American should have been injured. Moore was watching the operations through a field glass. By his side stood a Greek taking photographs. The two probably attracted the attention of the Turkish marksmen. The bullet that passed through Moore's neck killed a native behind him.

Dwight was under fire for some time. He was shot while endeavoring to reach Constantinople from a village a few miles off. Moore was shot in the chest and was taken to the hospital. The bullet that passed through Moore's neck killed a native behind him.

Three shots passed through the windows of the German embassy, while the residence of the German consul-general, the bullets penetrating the iron shutters of the windows as though the shutters were paper. An Italian seaman on the guard ship Galileo was killed by the discharge of a shell.

Observed Engagement.
A fine view was had of the engagement at the Tash Kischla barracks from the roof garden of the German embassy. Dr. von Mierul, consul-general, of the embassy, and the military and naval attaches were among those who witnessed the whole fight.

The Yildiz Kiosk was about 2,500 yards distant, and the barracks were more than 500 yards. One side of the barracks was almost blown away. Not less than 500 of the garrison finally retreated by the rear gates, dragging machine guns with them. They fought in the Turkish graveyard, with fronts the embassy, until fifty of them were killed, and more than 1,000 wounded. Then they hoisted the white flag and surrendered.

The troops who were made prisoners were conveyed under strong escort to Stamboul and interned in the office. As they passed through the streets of Pera, which so lately echoed their gaiters, surrounded by dusty brown Saloni fighting men, they looked sullen and dejected, and seemed to resent deeply their defeat at the hands of fellow-Muslims.

The people on the streets were impressed with the quick fate that had overtaken the mutineers. This conflict between Moslems has had a profound effect upon the Turkish people, and it is feared that it may become the seed of further trouble.

Questioned as to whether they fired upon the Saloni soldiers, one of the prisoners declared that they did not. He said that the Saloni soldiers were ordered to surrender without a shot. Had not their officers hidden the keys to the storehouses where the guns and ammunition were kept, the Saloni soldiers would have rendered without resistance. There were relatively few victims. Order and security perfect.

As Heard in Washington.
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 24.—The following is the official version of today's developments at Constantinople, as received by the Turkish embassy here from the Foreign Office at Constantinople late this afternoon:

"The Second and Third Army Corps entered Constantinople and occupied the barracks, most of which were rendered without resistance. There were relatively few victims. Order and security perfect.

"The houses and foreign missions (embassies, legations, etc.) and the banks, as well as hotels, are guarded by the military, so that there is safety in the town. These measures were only taken for precaution."

Miss Mary Custis Lee, mentioned in Constantinople dispatches as being among the Americans who are now in Constantinople, is a daughter of General Robert E. Lee, and was born in the mansion at Arlington, Va. She sailed from this country more than a year ago.

Relatives in Alexandria, Va., were not aware that she was in Turkey. The early part of the winter she was in Egypt, whence she went to Greece. For the past thirty years, Miss Lee has been a traveler, mostly alone.

Frank G. Carpenter, of Washington, who, with his wife and daughter, are also in the Turkish capital, is a well known newspaper syndicate writer. He has been in the Holy Land, and planned to arrive at Constantinople yesterday and remain until May 6.

The ambassador says he managed to have Moore transported through the firing line, and the wounded man is resting comfortably in the French hospital. Mr. Leishman adds that the American embassy is well protected by a guard of soldiers detailed by the commanding officer of the invading force.

Report Unfounded.
[Special Cable to The Times-Dispatch.] LONDON, April 24.—The report that William Maxwell, the well-known correspondent of the Daily Mail, was killed at Constantinople is unfounded.

Mr. Montague Spoke.
WASHINGTON, D. In the Air.
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 24.—Lieutenants Zahn Foulais and Winter of the aeronautical division of the Signal Corps to-day made an ascent in Signal Corps balloon No. 10 and rose to a height of over 1,000 feet. Other balloons were also in the air, and the purpose of training the officers and men and corps preparatory to the trials with the army dirigible No. 1, and with the Wright and other aeroplanes later in the season.

Leaving here at noon the balloon was taken on a southerly course. At midnight no word had reached Washington to indicate the balloon's whereabouts. The fact that she had not landed occasioned no surprise among Signal Corps officers. It is supposed that the balloon is considerably more than 100 miles from here and is drifting over the Chesapeake Bay. The aeronauts left here fully equipped for such a long trip, and were fully prepared with the great gas capacity of the balloon to remain in the air four days without coming to the ground.

New Flesh-Colored Product That Heals and Hides Skin Imperfections.

A peculiar feature of possum, a new skin discovery, is that it is naturally flesh-colored and contains no grease, so that when used on the face for pimples, or any other inflammations, blemishes, or discolorations, its presence cannot be detected. It can thus be applied in the daytime, the natural color of the skin being immediately restored and the actual healing and curing process accomplished in a few days. It can be had of any pharmacist who sells pure drugs. Traders make a specialty of it for the troubles mentioned or in curing ordinary cases of eczema, itching spots, etc.

Any one who will write to the Emergency Laboratories, No. 42 West Twenty-fifth Street, New York, can secure by mail free of charge a sample of the new skin discovery, which will cure or clear a complexion overnight and remove pimples in twenty-four hours.

University of North Carolina here in debate to-night. The decision of the judges was unanimous. The debate was spirited, both teams putting up strong arguments.

Yielding to the opening and closing speeches. The question debated was: "Postal Savings Banks as Advocated in the Chamberlain Bill should be Established in Virginia." The affirmative side of the question, Carolina, the negative, the Virginia team was composed of Henry Johnston, Maurice Hirsch, John W. Umstead, J. C. M. Vann and C. Cox, alternate, represented Carolina.

North Carolina Wins.
NEW ORLEANS, April 24.—The University of North Carolina won the debate here to-night upon the advisability of postal savings banks. Tulane University, of Louisiana, was North Carolina's opponent, and had the affirmative.

WAS TEACHING SCHOOL

One of the Men Pardoned by Governor Willson Was So Enraged.
KITTANNING, April 24.—John W. Powers, a non-resident of this State, yesterday by Governor Willson, of Kentucky, has been living in this town for the past few months with his wife, under the name of Professor John W. Christie, having charge of the Sayers Business College. He made the fact known to-day that he is one of the men celebrated in the tragedy of Senator William Goebel.

Powers traveled over South America from 1900 to 1902, arrived in San Francisco, and later in Pittsburg, where he met Professor E. J. Sayers, who offered him a position as teacher in his new Kensington, Pa., school. After two years Sayers was sent to Emmon, Pa., to open a new school for Sayers. It was here he met Lena M. Kuhns, who was a pupil, and later became a teacher under him. They were married at St. Catherine's, Canada, under the name of Powers. After their marriage they moved to Kittanning, where Sayers opened another school with Powers in charge. Powers said he and his wife will leave for Kentucky immediately.

UNUSUAL SCENE

Play Interrupted Five Minutes as Mark of Respect to Governor.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 24.—An unusual scene was enacted at the Hyperion Theatre this afternoon, where Olga Nethersole was appearing in "The Writing on the Wall." At three minutes past 4 o'clock, when the play was in progress, the lights were dimmed, and Miss Nethersole's leading man, stepping in front of the curtain, and stopping the orchestra, addressed the audience in behalf of Miss Nethersole, saying that Acting Governor Weeks, of Connecticut, had suggested that as a mark of respect to the late Governor Lilley at 4 o'clock all people in Connecticut should cease work for a period of at least five minutes. Miss Nethersole requested the audience to remain in absolute silence during the time, and that the company and staff would also cease labor for the same period.

Mr. Morris also called attention to the fact that on the stage of the theatre Governor Lilley had received his nomination. An impressive silence and bowed heads was the response of the audience.

No Lives Lost But Volcano Starts on a Fresh Campaign.

[Special Cable to The Times-Dispatch.] MEXICO CITY, April 24.—The interior parts of the States of Guerrero and Oaxaca have been severely shaken by a series of earthquakes which have occurred at frequent intervals during the past few days. The shocks have been felt in Acapulco, Chilla and a number of other places say that the seismic disturbances did considerable damage.

No lives were lost. Colima Volcano has also started on a fresh campaign and is heaving forth enormous quantities of lava. The smoke from the volcano has settled over the country for many miles around the mountain like a pall. At night the lava is lighted up by a blaze of flame, which is emitted from the crater. Earth tremblings accompany the more violent outbursts of the mountain.

It keeps the store free of rats and mice. The cat was in a corner of the store eating for her lone kitten, when the bulldog entered.

In a moment pussy's back rose and her tail thickened. The cat, though, was full of fight, and lit on the bulldog's back, and sank her nails in his neck. Then the dog and cat did a Marathon about the store, upsetting boxes of soap and groceries and vegetables on the floor and in the window. Finally they fought their way into the kitchen where they were given hammer and tongs. Mrs. Lee, after several vain efforts to separate the animals, picked up her son's baseball bat from the corner and swung on the dog. The bat hit the animal on the head between the eyes and the bulldog fell over dead as a mackerel. Its skull was crushed.

PROUD OF RELIGION.

Governor Stubbs Attributes His Success to Prayer.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] TOPEKA, KAN., April 24.—Governor Stubbs firmly believes that whatever success he has had in private life is due to his prayers to God and the answering of them by the Almighty. He made this statement to the delegates of the Christian Endeavor Society in convention in Topeka. Continuing the Governor said: "I am not ashamed to tell you that I pray every day to serve God. For a great part of my life I was ashamed to have people know that I prayed. One of the things in my life every day is to know what I ought to do. I believe God answers prayer, and I am not ashamed to have it known that I ask God to tell me what to do. I am not ashamed to say that I try to serve God, and I believe that God has very great occasion to be ashamed of me. The man who professes to be a Christian ought to feel that it is a great honor to him even to assert such a relationship. For the greater part of my life I was actually ashamed to have people know that I prayed, but I now think people ought to be proud to have it known that they honor God."

Harris Defense Closes.

IRVINE, KY., April 24.—The defense in the trial of Beach Harris, charged with the murder of his father, Judge James Harris, of Breathitt county, completed its testimony this evening. Harris told of alleged beatings given him by his father, and his mother, widow of the victim, corroborated his testimony. The aged grandmother of the defendant also testified to Judge Harris's alleged harshness towards his son. The widow swore that Judge Harris had threatened to kill Beach a few days before the tragedy.

The young patrician insisted that his father was striking and choking him; that his eyes were "popping" out, and that everything had begun to look green when he began firing. On cross-examination Harris admitted that he was a habitual drinker, and was in the habit of using his pistol threateningly.
